– February 22 2024 –
Paris - France

From June 28 to 30 2024, the French Astronomical Society organises the first ever International Congress of the Astronomical Youth (ICAY). This first edition will take place at École normale supérieure - Paris Sciences & Lettres (ENS-PSL), France under the patronage of Hélène Courtois and Jean-Philippe Uzan. During three days, conferences by researchers and students, debates, and visits to emblematic astronomical sites will occur.

Registrations for this global premiere are now open! We offer low-cost accommodation in the heart of Paris from June 27th to 29th, 2024. Just reach out to <https://forms.gle/qRqZ562UmpRBLBY58>.

At ICAY, we aim at putting student work at the heart of our project. As such, all students from the master's level onwards can present their work during the open sessions of the congress to an international audience.

Above all, we aim to foster unbreakable bounds between the international research community and students, facilitate innovative international projects, and disseminate the latest advancements in cosmology and astrophysics, whether theoretical, instrumental, or observational.
